Notes for Cyprian Bulloch, Jr.:

"Warm Springs: Home of a Hatchery...and a President. Another old-timer in the Southeast, Warm Springs NFH came into existence as a result of 1898 legislation authorizing the establishment of a "fish cultural station" in Meriwether County, Georgia. This small community of Warm Springs, 65 miles southwest of Atlanta, was called Bullochville before its incorporation in 1924.

In 1899, brothers Cyprian and Benjamine Bulloch and their cousin Sarah J. Bussey, owners of a 1,500 acre plantation in Meriwether County, donated 16 acres of land to the Fish Commission upon which to construct a fish hatchery. This acreage included three natural springs to supply water for hatchery operations. From these springs, water flowed out of the ground at a constant temperature of 62.6 degrees Fahrenheit."
